Jean Béliveau strolls into the Central Coast.

Walk to make world safe

ALICIA McCUMSTIE

CREATING a non-violent world for children is something most of us care about, but for Jean Béliveau it's a mission he's completing, one step at a time.

The Canadian is walking around the world to promote peace and non-violence for the profit of all children.

This week the father of two, who has been described by members of the international media as "a real life Forrest Gump", pushed his three-wheeled stroller, which is packed with only a small amount of food, clothing, a first aid kit, a small tent and sleeping bag, through the Central Coast, before enjoying a couple of days at Shirley Phillips' Narara home.

"My husband and I were up at Iluka about three weeks ago and we had stopped at Little Italy and Jean was holed up in there," Mrs Phillips said.

"We started chatting and he told us all about his travels, he has the most amazing stories, including how he met Nelson Mandela, and how he stays with people he meets along the way, so we invited him to come and stay with us when he reached the coast."

While the weather was less than ideal, it didn't faze the adventurer, who started his journey on his birthday in 2000.

"For me it's not my walk, but I don't think I'm doing anything amazing," Mr Béliveau said.

However, thousands of people around the world would disagree, with many of them following his progress through his website www.walk.org.
